Teen Age Monsters Don't Attract Boys

by Count Marco

Lately there have been movies on the subject of strange teenagers, with such titles as "I Was a Teen-age Werewolf," "Teen-age Monster," and "Teen-age Dracula."

But I saw two yesterday who couldn't even get into horror pictures, no matter how horrible the film. How they ever made it to this planet will always be a mystery to me.

Their hair was ratted to a point that even the make-up man working on a horror film would envy. Their dresses were way above the soiled, knobby knees, and their young bodies, already going to flab juttled out so far in the rear that they reminded me of swayback horses.

Far too many American teenage girls today look as if they've never seen a bathtub, much less combs, keep with you only a face cloth or packets of the instant face washers that are so refreshing. If you must use lipstick, use it sparingly.

Instead of rattling your hair until you look as if it was done in your mother's automatic washing machine, use a brush. Your hair should be simply cut and styled so that a quick brushing will keep it neat and in place.

Look around the school yard. The boys are usually clustered around the neat, clean-looking girls who are proud of their youthful, natural looks. By the boys that type is held always in awe and respect.

The others, those who also draw the boys, attract only the kind who likes to brag about you, and their bragging won't make you blush with pride but burn with shame—if you have any. A man always appreciates a clean-looking girl.

May you be that one.

been inside one. Around the eyes alone is enough goo to mix a whole batch of witch's brew.

I know your parents don't know what you're up to. They trust you too much. I have seen you in the mornings on your way to school plastering your faces up with what you call "goop," thinking you're hurrying the growing-up process.

You remind me of the joke I overheard recently about a teenager who rushed breathlessly up to the trash collector with a waste basket, just as the latter was loading his truck, and asked, "Am I too late for the trash?" After a fast look he shuddered and said quickly, "No, girly, jump in!"

Instead of a purse loaded with tubes, eye pencils and rattling
